"And when the thin grey man fell into the tank," said Amos, "it didn't make any sound at all." This statement is, I think, based on a cognitive error inculcated (probably) by American high school education. The error is that all proofs must be of the "hard" kind, i.e., cut-and-dried and susceptible of presentation in syllogistic form. An acquaintance with the modern philosophy of science would disabuse people of this notion; even a surprising amount of scientific proof is not of this kind. As philosophers since Plato have been pointing out, aesthetic and moral matters are usually not susceptible of such "hard" proof. you will be expected to pay tribute in measure of your standing. "Not at all." At midnight I was still awake, sitting in number five in my jockey shorts with the light out and the door open.
